OPENING EXERCISES.

The celebration of the One Hundred and Tenth Anniversary of the National Independence is a thing of the past. In Albany at least it was a memorable event, honored in a fitting manner. To our city it was not only the Anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, but it was the first opportunity of celebrating in anticipation our own Two Hundredth Anniversary as a city. This was anticipated in the exercises which opened the Grand Loan Exhibition of the historic and rare collection in the Boys' Academy, which makes the first chapter of the Bi-Centennial Celebration.

The day itself was all that could be desired. The weather was certainly warm, but it would have been strange if it had not been. It was not sultry, however, and a clear sky and an occasional breeze served to reconcile all as far as possible to perfect July temperature. "Early in the morning and by the light of day," the large boys and small boys amused themselves with firecracker, toy pistol and diminutive cannon, and forced upon the attention, even of the deepest sleeper, the fact that it was the Fourth, or rather that the Fourth was being celebrated, and "all day long the noise of battle rolled." The day was ushered in by the usual salute from the same old cannon that has so often pealed forth the notice to our citizens. Not many hours after daylight the fields in the vicinity of the city were alive with base ball games, which is, with many of the rising generation, a regular way of beginning the celebration of the Fourth.

Shortly before nine o'clock the regular and official celebration of the day was initiated by the Jackson Corps leaving their armory, on Beaver street, and proceeding to the armory of the Burgesses, on Broadway. The Jackson Corps was under the command of Major McFarlane, and numbered forty-three muskets, six staff officers and four officers of the line, a total of fifty-three. The Burgesses Corps, commanded by Major Van Zandt, presented a rank of thirty-six muskets, nine staff and three officers of the line, in all forty-eight. The two companies presented a fine appearance as they proceeded up Broadway to Livingston avenue, to Ten Broeck street, to Clinton avenue, to Pearl street, to State street, to the City Hall.

EXERCISES IN THE CITY HALL.

In the City Hall the regular Fourth of July exercises took place, the common council chamber being, as usual, the theatre. Before half-past ten, the hour at which the exercises were to commence, the chamber was densely filled, while a large number, unable to obtain admittance, filled the halls and front of the building. A most interesting programme was carried out as follows: Music, Doring's band; prayer, Rev. Joseph A. Lanahan; address by Mayor Thacher; reading of Declaration of Independence, Eugene Brumaghim; oration, George W. Kirchwey.

The oration by Mr. Kirchwey was a masterly and exhaustive effort. The speaker reviewed some of the evils threatening the republic, and pointed out the many dangers and abuses to which a representative government is subject. At the close he was heartily applauded. The Declaration of Independence was read plainly and forcibly by Mr. Brumaghim.

At the conclusion of the Fourth of July exercises the concourse proceeded to the Academy park, where the Bi-Centennial Loan Exhibition was to be opened. First came the Albany City band, then the Jackson Corps escorting the Loan Commission, Mr. J. Howard King, chairman, J. Townsend Lansing, John L. Van Valkenburgh, Douw H. Fonda, Charles Tracey, Prof. Boss, Samuel B. Townet, Henry J. Ten Eyck, W. O. Stillman, James T. Gardiner, George D. Miller, W. W. Crannell, Craig McClure, Capt. Henry Cushman, and others.

Then came Doring's band in front of the Burgesses Corps, which acted as escort to the mayor and common council. There were in this party: Mayor Thacher, accompanied by President Patrick McCann, Ald. Hitt, Greagan, Fleming, Norton, Klar, and others, in front of whom was Marshal Thomas H. Craven.

The column was formed on Eagle street, right resting on State street, and the following was the line of march: Eagle to State, to Swan, to Washington, to Boys' Academy.

OPENING EXERCISES.

The opening exercises of the Bi-Centennial Loan Exhibition were held in the tent which had been erected in the rear of the academy. Seated on the stage, waiting for the procession to arrive, were Mrs. Erastus Corning, Jr., Mrs. Marcus T. Hun, Mrs. Gen. Farnsworth, Mrs. V. P. Douw, Mrs. Dr. Bartlett, Mrs. John Boyd Thacher, Mrs. Philip Ten Eyck, Mrs. Jacob H. Ten Eyck, Mrs. James P. Boyd.

About twelve o'clock the mayoralty party and the Loan Commission arrived at the tent and took places upon the stage, and soon after the exercises opened to an audience that tested the capacity of the enclosure. When composure reigned, Mr. J. Howard King, chairman of the Commission, stepped forward and said:

"The exercises will now commence with a Bi-Centennial march, specially composed for this occasion by Mr. Frank E. Greene, and rendered by the Philharmonic Society, a recently organized amateur association of which we are all justly proud, and whose generous contribution to enhance the pleasures of this day is now and hereafter will always be most thoroughly appreciated, and to them will rightfully belong the honor of the opening act of what we hope and confidently believe will prove a glorious celebration of our city's two hundredth birthday!"

DR. DAVIS' IMPRESSIVE PRAYER.

The overture was greatly enjoyed and loudly applauded. Rev. Dr. Wesley R. Davis then offered up the following impressive prayer for the Divine blessing :

"Lord God of the heavens and the earth, we adore Thee; we magnify Thy name for Thou art our refuge and strength; the joy of our days and the shelter of our souls. Under the shadow of Thy wings we live and breathe, and by the throbbing of Thy heart we know that our hearts are not forgotten. Thou dost call us Thy children; ignorant and foolish though we be, and even our sins cannot make us strangers to Thy love. We plead for pardon and peace through Jesus Christ, Thy son. We thank Thee for this day, with its brightness and beauty. We praise Thee for the memories that throng our spirits as we enter upon the Bi-Centennial of our city's chartered life. Thou hast been the guiding God of our fathers; Thou hast led them with pillar of cloud by day and with pillar of fire by night. They trusted in Thee and were not ashamed of their trust. Thou hast justified them before all nations, and crowned their love of liberty in the rights and privileges of their children, who dwell in serene homes and a fair land. Make us worthy heirs of the sturdy integrity, sound faith and pure love which transfixed their humble yet kingly lives. Bless us with strength and courage that we may be loyal to the convictions of righteousness, which are given unto us out of Thy truth. We pray Thee for the president of the United States and all associated with him in authority. Make him wise with the wisdom that cometh down from above; which is first pure, then peaceable, easy to be entreated and full of good works. Bless the governor of our own State, the mayor of our own city, and all who bear rule in our midst. Bless our people and homes and the multitude of strangers that shall soon come to tarry with us. May our gladness and just pride, our sense of civic prosperity and power recognize Thee as the inspiration of human joy, progress and peace. Make us to know that all gifts of mind—that have their bloom in art and science, in philosophy and song, in commerce and government—spring forth from Thy universal power and grow under Thy universal care. Be with us unto life's end and afterward receive us to Thy glory for Christ's sake. Amen."

Mr. King then addressed Mayor Thacher, and in behalf of the Commission turned over the exhibition to the city in the following words :

PRESIDENT KING'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Mayor and Gentlemen of the Citizens' Bi-Centennial Committee :

On behalf of the ladies and gentlemen of the Bi-Centennial Loan Commission, it is my proud privilege and official duty, to beg your acceptance of this collection of articles, relating chiefly to the history, progress and peculiarities of Albany, and which has been handed down from generation to generation, till made sacred through the lapse of time, it has come to be ranked among our household gods.

These rare, curious and interesting treasures of ancient and modern art have been gathered together with infinite care, patience and taste, and I should, sir, be lacking to-day in the most important of my obligations, did I fail to call your attention to the arduous services, cheerfully rendered, by the ladies and gentlemen composing the different committees of our Loan Commission. For no one knows better than I do that to their untiring efforts, in the brief space of time allotted to the work, coupled with the generous response with which their requests have been met, not only in our own but in sister cities, is due the whole credit of bringing together into this old building, replete with the recollections of the boyish days of so many of our fellow-citizens, these hundreds of rare and beautiful articles, making a complete showing of that persistence and thrift—those local characteristics handed down to us from the men who, two hundred years ago, stamped their impress upon the Albany of to-day—coupled with the most excellent achievements of modern art and skilled industry. And I feel, sir, it is not asking too much from all our fellow-citizens, that they should, by their prompt and generous patronage, testify their hearty appreciation of this self-imposed and truly patriotic task.

Two hundred years ago, Mr. Mayor, the Dutch trader, after buffeting cruel winds and angry waves, at last grounded his bark upon the banks of the Hudson, in front of what was to be the Albany of the then future, and with outstretched arms, laden with tokens of peace and good will, endeavored to win the confidence of the wily red man. To-day, in our turn, we are come to ask from you and your associates, the formal acceptance at our hands of these costly treasures and priceless relics, which serve to mark the "footsteps on the sands of time."

But how changed all the circumstances and surroundings; and while cherishing the hallowed memories of the past, it is with pleasurable pride we point to the newer Albany, with its hills crowned with almost unrivalled specimens of modern architecture, beautiful buildings, builded by the artist and artizan of to-day, its health-giving parks, its marts of thriving business, its houses of mercy, its temples for worship, and its happy and virtuous homes, and while on the threshold of those festivities which are to mark our two hundredth birthday, and upon which so much of earnest thought and careful deliberation has been expended by some of our best citizens, shall it not be both the pleasure and pride of every true Albanian to bear aloft the standard of our ancient home, and under its broad folds to swear for the future renewed allegiance to dear old Albany.

REPLY OF MAYOR THACHER.

Mayor John Boyd Thacher's reply was as follows:

MR. KING—I accept this work so wisely initiated and so happily completed. As chairman and acting for the Bi-Centennial General Committee, I assume control of the Loan Exhibition, and for myself and in behalf of our citizens, I return you our grateful and emphatic acknowledgments for the efforts you and your skillful associates have made in gathering into one convenient reservoir the curious relics and precious memorials of many ages. You have provided us with a pleasant diversion and a most instructive entertainment. Believe me, sir, we cannot forget the patient toil, the persistent exploration into half-forgotten fields, the sifting discernment and the tireless energy which have distinguished the exertions of the ladies and gentlemen forming your committees, and which shall henceforth raise, almost beyond the reach of others, the standard of love's sweetest labor and the measure of the most exalted generosity.

Citizens, we are assembled upon historic ground. It was here, in the second month of the year 1864, that the army relief bazaar was opened. Into its coffers our people poured their wealth to strengthen and maintain the noble work instituted by the sanitary commission of the war. In 1856 this place witnessed a brilliant scene. The benevolence of a few men and of one woman had given Albany a watching place for the stars, and the dedication of the Dudley observatory was celebrated here with enthusiasm and with splendor. Massachusetts loaned us her Everett, and that gifted orator bore his audience up into the heavens and sustained the flight for two fascinated hours.

In 1831, in a room in yonder building, was born the electro-magnetic telegraph. When Joseph Henry rang a bell over a wire more than a mile in length, it was an announcement to commerce and to the world, that the lightnings were harnessed and ready for their use. Henry was born in Albany, received his education in that building, there carried on his experiments and there made his discovery. Surely we owe the memory of this great man a mighty tribute and a brave reward.

On the 26th day of July, 1788, the State convention agreed to the adoption of the Federal Constitution. Two weeks afterward our city signalized the event with the most imposing ceremonies ever known in America up to that time, and which even now, after the lapse of a hundred years, we may not hope much to surpass during our Bi-Centennial Celebration. The procession was an hour and a half passing a given point, and in it every trade, profession and calling was represented, while our best citizens patriotically molded themselves into tableaux upon moving floats. Where we now are was the climax of the hill, and so it was of their efforts. Here the multitude sat down and feasted, drinking innumerable toasts to the compact of the States.

It was here in 1689, that Jacob Leisler's assumption of the governorship of New York was rebuked by the stubborn patriotism of the burgers and the fidelity of our Indian allies. Leisler sent his son-in-law, Milborne, with four ships and a company of armed soldiers to force a recognition of his authority, and to take from us our charter, which was declared null and void because granted in the time of King James II. The mayor was shut up with a small force in Fort Albany, at about the point where St. Peter's church now stands. Milborne marched up to the fort and demanded admission, which was denied him, whereupon he prepared to fire. Then a company of Mohawk Indians, encamped where we now are, sent word to Milborne, that if he did not at once withdraw they would destroy him and his men. The New York usurpers retired and our charter remained safe in its seal and in its integrity.

So I say that the spirit of historic interest inhabits the spot chosen for this exhibition, and it is our duty to recall its glories, hallowed as they are by charity, dignified by benevolence, immortalized by scientific discovery.

made sacred by fidelity and patriotism, and now in these latter days dedicated forever to the great cause of education and the advancement of learning.

Mayor Thacher then in a most happy style introduced the poet of the day, Mr. William D. Morange, who read the following composition, which was often interrupted with applause:

THE POEM.

All things combining, urging and inviting
 To make the hour auspicious and delighting —
 The gentle cracker and the tuneful gun;
 The small boy's cannon, bursting with its fun;
 The drum that's beat by every Lackey Horner;
 The horn that's heard — or taken at the corner.
 The gay parades, this marvellous display,
 This courtly audience honoring the day,
 All things persuading, prompting and inspiring,
 The intellectual gun to do some firing —
 Here, on this sweet and restful day, old Time
 Comes up, to be put down in prose and rhyme.
 Oh! that the men of vanished days could see
 The eager present, big with history,
 Debating over famous spots and nooks
 Located variously in various books!
 Oh! that the men of vanished days could hear
 The stories of the past that now appear!
 By some whose minds upon the past are bent
 It might be thought in order to present
 On this occasion something like a show
 Of all the past we read about or know;
 Great Scripture memories, served with solemn phrase,
 Allusions to the classic Roman days,
 The lives, the big events, the joys, the tears,
 Comprised within our past two hundred years:
 The birth of empires and their vast dissensions,
 Enormous wars and wonderful inventions;
 The strange exploits and mysteries of crime
 Encompassed by that period of time;
 Others might think their boulder duty lay,
 To fairly revel in a mixed display
 Of feathers, beaver skins and telephones,
 Cocked hats, mould candles, gas and cobble stones,
 Steamboats, old wigs, pipes, krout and fancy stitches,
 Flint locks, bows, Gatling guns and leather breeches,
 Street pumps and scalping knives, electric lights,
 And clubs and hatchets used in various fights,
 Including clubs that, in these times of peace,
 Are sometimes used by our discreet police.

And so, contrast the past with present days,
And show each epoch's various whims and ways.
Others, again, might urgently insist
On filling out a long and labored list
Of customs, laws and facts, from Hudson down,
That makes the story of our grand old town;
The style of Indian and the things they wore,
When Hudson's vessel glided to the shore;
The style of Dutchmen that prevailed, when fate,
Made them the rulers of more recent date,
And ringing through the hills and valleys round,
Old Dutch made Indian war whoops weak in sound.
Others might want to give the subject life,
Some fiery notes of Dutch and Indian strife;
Some thrilling tales of those long-buried days
When old time water earned its meed and praise;
When moving proudly to the river's side,
The Halfmoon people mixed their drinks with pride,
And taught the Mohawks, waiting at the shore,
Ideas of Indian corn not known before.
Some more might ask, as requisite and just,
To lift our glory out of common dust.
All things pertaining to our busy past;
The push and fire that made us grow so fast;
A business record of the changes made
In churches, burial-grounds and haunts of trade;
The truths, the fables in the guise of truth,
In print, or whispered of our city's youth;
The sounding titles of the potent race
That early held dominion in the place;
The lovely women and the daring men,
All these might tribute claim from voice and pen;
Have genuine interest and charming power,
Give History's garden many a blooming flower.
But well may wait some other brilliant hour.
We simply celebrate that long gone time,
When stout young Albany began to climb
The hill of fame; to note that famous hour,
When clad with chartered right we rose to power;
To glorify the date we won our name,
Albeit in modern style, we start the game
With great display and many a sounding word
A little while before the thing occurred.
Two hundred years ago, that is to say,
'Twill be two hundred at some future day,
One Thomas Dongan — famous Irishman —
Bestowed home rule on Dutchmen, and began

The chartered town now here, and linked his name
 Forever with the story of our fame.
 To found great cities was a cherished thought,
 That through all ages mighty wonders wrought.
 Prophets and poets, seers and gifted men,
 Were never more sublimely known, than when
 On bold imagination's rapid wing,
 They, o'er the living present hastening,
 Cleft the far future, and with proud delight,
 Announced some dream of undeveloped might ;
 Declared some spot of small renown to be
 The favored choice of wondrous destiny,
 When from the sparkling and majestic tide
 That fronts our town our shipmen saw with pride
 The scenes of marvellous beauty all around —
 The pleasant vales, the hills with splendor crowned —
 Some dreams of future glory must have marked
 The quiet region where they disembarked.
 Well might they bear their glowing stories back,
 Of the fair place that charmed them in their track,
 And tell the people of the dams and dykes —
 Van Rensselaers, Schuylers, and Van Dycks —
 How fame and fortune hovered round these parts,
 And fire with eager hope their souls and hearts.
 We have no special evidence that when
 The tale was told to those old Holland men,
 They dreamed what empire here might be displayed,
 Or held it other than a place of trade ;
 Yet, ere the charter came, a fort was here,
 A church, a market, lumber mills and beer,
 A sketch of present time, although the place
 Has changed a trifle since those days of grace,
 As those who recollect, and from the Dutch
 Bought newspapers and ale, cigars and such,
 Will readily concede, when looking round,
 They note how now such luxuries abound.
 When, as the gift of time our charter came,
 And gave the watchword for our future fame,
 From that date onward, down to present days,
 The record of our home commands our praise.
 The story of our progress may not show
 Impetuous haste — these days might call it slow --
 But all along our line of march there comes,
 Now through the noise of war and roll of drums,
 Now through the days of peace and quiet hours,
 The evidence of sterling worth and powers,
 The honest traders who began our life
 And came to meet the club and scalping knife,

Wise with the maxims, habits and intent,
That through all ages marked their own descent ;
Brought with them to the savage solitude
A stately form, a friend that grandly stood,
Their guest, protector, source of strength and might,
Their herald to true glory based on right,
Wearing their garb, and speaking in their tongue,
In tones that through all later times have rung ;
Bearing the legends, grand and eloquent ;
" In Union Strength "—" Taxation by Consent "
" Free Right to Worship God." The friend I see
Was civil and religious liberty !
Intolerance shadowed not with gloomy wing
Our early soil, nor thrust its deadly sting ;
Our young life blood of progress felt no death
From the foul poison of its vampire breath,
Such is our record, though our title be
Fort Orange, Beaverwyck or Albany.
Satiric fancy, dealing with our past,
Might make some glory hunters stand aghast,
And hardly realize our claim to glory,
From certain features noted in the story.
If to be quaint and whimsical in plan,
With odd streets, staggering like a drunken man,
Accord but strangely with the proud renown
That lights a classic or historic town —
If the old place, a hundred years ago,
Might lack in certain things we moderns know —
If Holland brick in clumsy structure piled,
With curious roofs fantastically tiled,
May not exhibit Architecture's throne
With all the wonders later times have shown —
If to be hallowed ground, the crimson trace
Of grand exploits must illustrate the place,
And the immediate soil we tread must bear
Ensanguined evidence — then seek elsewhere !
But if to be the teeming source of power ;
The fount of bold device that rules the hour,
The theatre of wise suggestive plan
And schemes of blessing unto fellow-man,
If to have gloried in and hailed with praise
A throng of heroes since the early days ;
If martial ardor glowed with splendid fire,
Compelling even foemen to admire ;
If to have been, and still remain to be,
The home of gentle hospitality,
Refinement, lofty aims and generous hearts,
The patron, lover, friend of all the arts —

If such a record may a glow impart
To local annals — let us all take part !
I envy not the man whose honest glance
Takes in our past — war, business or romance
Our martial annals, or the large display
Of genius, beauty, serious life or gay,
Who cannot recognize all through our story
Our genuine claim to real substantial glory.
Here our great Cooper found attractive themes
That filled his speaking page with glowing dreams ;
Here, where his pungent satire grew more bright
Our Irving gathered flowers of rare delight ;
Here Franklin for the first time promulgates
The plan which makes us now United States ;
Here, like the planets circling round the sun,
Old chivalry took light from Washington,
And gallant Schuyler, ardent Lafayette,
And kindred souls familiar moved and met.
Here, the great central seat of power and law,⁴
Came those whose just renown the nation saw ;
The men of splendid rhetoric and brain,
Whose eloquence could every heart enchain.
The magnates of the past, whose genius shines
And later history brightens and refines,
From time to time found here abiding place,
And felt the charm of genuine social grace.
I need not make a catalogue display,
Nor more than merely mention the array
Of great men, of our own or other nation,
Who found old Albany a pleasant station ;
Nor try to run the glorious list all over
From George, first president, to later Grover ;
Not yet anticipating history
Complete the splendid line with David B.
If some may find our progress too sedate,
Too slow and tedious, for the headlong gait,
Whirl, fire and dash, that yields such sudden birth
To younger cities on our western earth —
Cool judgment still may find a deal to praise,
In what the cynics call our old Dutch ways ;
We are no longer Dutch in power or name ;
Our acts, not lineage, merit praise or blame,
New men, of different race and various clan,
The Saxon, Frenchman, Scotchman, Irishman,
The German with the down east Yankee, rear
Alike the standard of dominion here,
Urge, coax and guide us on with rapid pace,
And make the future of this old Dutch place.

For what old Dutch ideas control us still — Sound judgment, conscience, and right will —
 Thank heaven ! and may the kind benignant fates
 Arouse and strengthen more such old Dutch traits !
 Time's potent finger may with sudden change
 Deck other spots with life more rare and strange,
 But if sedate and less impulsive, we
 Just simply waddled, we might thankful be,
 If with the consciousness that things begun,
 Exhibit prudence, justice, right, when done !
 One hundred thousand souls go far to prove
 That progress here is surely on the move.
 We certainly have magnified a deal
 Since here the Mohawks ate their Indian meal,
 And spite of all the sneers that make us slow
 The fact of utterance does not make it so.
 In countless traits, we justly dare to stand
 The peer of any city in the land !
 In one thing we are like the old Dutch people
 Before the days of banking house and steeple ;
 For, through the forests of our streets and houses,
 A cunning, savage foe, at times arouses
 The thoughtless settlers, with the knives and axes
 We moderns learn to know as jobs and taxes.
 But with a leader, brave, resolved and true,
 Who knows his duty and who dares to do,
 Like him, who fills with grace our civic chair
 And writes his title JOHN BOYD THACHER, mayor —
 Let the wild Indian come, with whoop and rattle,
 If pluck and bravery count, he'll win the battle !
 Now, take our city, all in all, her claim
 Is large and just for past and present fame.
 With radiant power, the glory of the past
 Lights up the present ; present days will cast
 New radiance on the future ; and when time
 Shall tell in careful prose, or careless rhyme,
 The record of what makes our claim to glory ;
 One pleasant feature in the splendid story,
 Securing praise, inspiring new ambition,
 Will be the fact of this grand EXHIBITION ;
 This noble work, inspired by cultured thought,
 And fair hands helping, to perfection brought,
 High honor to the ladies and the men !
 To HOWARD KING — our KING — yet citizen ;
 Our STILLMAN, MATHER, GARDNER, BOSS, TEN EYCK
 And all the earnest throng whose aim alike
 Has been to honor in your spacious hall
 Our fine old city's birthday festival.

Then came an oration by Mr. Leonard Kip, as follows :

THE ORATION.

It has been our custom hitherto to improve our National Anniversary with no stinted commendation of our origin, progress and resources. We have satisfactorily reviewed our foreign wars, and have learned to believe that every battle was for us a victory, and every leader upon our side a master of military strategy. We have told ourselves that all our soldiers were heroes inspired with patriotic fire, and that all against whom we have ever fought were minions of brutal tyrants. We have looked into our congressional halls, and recognized in our representatives marvels of unequalled ability and learning ; and we have noted in their settlement of foreign difficulties, the exhibition of wonderful skill and acumen, ever, as through some kindly fate, working for our sole glory and advancement. And this has come about — we somewhat modestly admit — not from having educated in ourselves such unsurpassable qualities, but simply from the tendency of our free and independent institutions to create in us a nation of gifted citizens, adorned with attributes of valor and statesmanship which, in the nature of things, could not be expected to grace the down-trodden subjects of selfish and effete monarchies. Such has always been our pleasant programme upon this day ; and perhaps its exaggerations need not too severely be scrutinized, since they may not unlikely tend to evoke a patriotic sentiment, firm in the idea that certainly no sacrifices of life or fortune could be too great if made in defense of such incomparable results of political freedom.

Now, for a while, we change our method, letting the great interests of the nation at large go on without our patronage, and bringing our observation down to the more limited area of our city, which, with good reason, has chosen this day to celebrate a striking event in its own history. It happens that, two hundred years ago, the settlement of Albany gained a charter and became invested with civic dignities. To us, at first sight, this scarcely seems to be a matter worthy of great attention. A city charter is merely a change of government, in what has previously existed safely under the shield and protection of a larger organization ; and hence it gives simply the power to conduct municipal operations under a different and generally more complicated system. But in the olden days a city charter was a sacred thing, to be long and earnestly striven for, and, as sometimes happened, to be attained only through war or insurrection. Towns grew into importance and shrank back again into obscurity without having been deemed worthy of the honor ; other and perhaps smaller towns secured it only by valor in some especial cause, or as a reward for distinguished political services. The giving of a charter was as the sword of knighthood laid upon the civic shoulder — the patent of its nobility — the partial release from feudal tenures. It placed the city more closely beneath the protection of its sovereign ; it gave it what did not then always exist, the right to protect itself. Its streets might run red with blood in contest with some rival city, but it would be in maintenance of its vested privileges, and this consciousness alone would be sufficient to give vigor to the defense. It could organize civic institutions, with fair expectation that, under the protecting agis of the charter, they would become permanent; and it could emblazon its arms upon its flag.

Naturally, therefore, it could not fail to happen, that almost from the very foundation of Albany — or at least from the earliest time when it began to be apparent that it had a fair promise of a successful future — ideas of civic independence should accompany its growth and color its aspirations. Its original settlers, upon leaving Europe, had by no means cast aside their traditions or affiliations; why should not Albany some day attain the dignity of older cities? And why, in fact, should it not, in this broad land, where everything was of such rapid growth, reach its due measure of importance with yet greater celerity; so that, instead of toiling for centuries through abject vassalage, it could advance with speedy pace, and even in a single generation attain some measure of dignity and self-government? In the beginning a mere trading post upon the border of a manorial estate, it had been held in something like feudal dependence, under a crude system of law, tempered only by the shadow of colonial authority, which, centered at a distance, could not always successfully maintain its influence or afford protection. Then, set apart by itself and a semblance of freedom given it, it was still somewhat overborne by the authority of its powerful neighbor, as well as bound by olden tendencies toward consent and agreement, if not entire obedience. And when at last the charter was bestowed, and Albany became a free and independent city, it must have been with much self-satisfaction and complacency. Those ancestors of ours were not, by nature, unduly given to open demonstration of their feelings; and did not, as far as we now can tell, hail their charter with fireworks, processions and pageantry. But all the same, it was a boon for which in their quiet manner they greatly rejoiced; knowing that now they could stand before the world, as did their ancestral cities abroad, free, under certain necessary restrictions, to make their own laws and endow their school, churches and seats of learning, and in many ways look forward to assured prosperity, as well as to possible commercial importance.

And now, in pleasant memory of that time, we open our celebration of Albany's Bi-Centenary. We will speak about our natural resources, our commerce and manufactures, our railroad and water connections; and we will give out our invitations to all the world, to come and establish fraternal trade with us. We will look with satisfaction upon being one of the oldest living cities of the thirteen colonies. We will review our history and point with pride to the fact that in the Revolution, Albany was so long the keystone of the contest, the critical position which, if once lost, would result in all being lost, the objective point for the possession of which two armies fought. And in addition, as flowers to a feast, we have here collected into one pleasing museum the treasures of our homes, to exemplify our perception of taste, our artistic culture and our veneration for the past. Some of this gathered wealth speaks only of the present, and claims no other recognition than for its beauty and costliness. As such it is welcome; and cannot fail, when rightly considered, to prove an incentive to future art. And there is much that comes to us redolent with sweet suggestions of the past; with richness of design or material more or less perhaps, or possibly with no especial artistic beauty at all, except the quaintness which in such matters is often beauty's handmaid, yet none the less of priceless value to us, since each piece whispers some story of the past. That tarnished lace — in its freshness it must once have decked some form of grace at the Court of William the Silent. That rusted sword — it must have been drawn for the faith in the army of Prince Maurice. That old stained and worm-eaten Bible — some pale brow and trembling lips may have bent over it for the last time, while the inquisitors of Philip stood knocking at the door below. That capacious bowl — it may have had festive groups of generals and councillors of State gathered about it, as they drank in rejoicing for some victory over the Spanish army. Is it not right that we should hold these relics in veneration? They not only speak to us about the past, but they tell us that Albany has an ancestry in art. They prove to us that those who earliest came among us did not, in canting spirit, attempt to cast away all beauty from their lives, but that it was a part of their earnest care to surround themselves, in their new relations, with pleasant memories of the days gone by; to the intent, perhaps, that when their shattered fortunes were repaired, the whole sweet past might be restored in all its power, and their homes again bloom with the accustomed loveliness and refinement.

But when the heir, who at his majority has come to his estate with great rejoicing, would wish at some future period to celebrate a particular epoch in his life, we are apt to ask what should be the incentive to the new festivities, and how far they may be justified by what has past? What has been the life that now is to be signalized with loud acclaim, what the performance of its early promise, and what its influence upon its period and surroundings? If it has been a barren, profitless life, remarkable only for its duration, wherein should it be made an occasion for joyful gathering? The beggar at the gate, with his still more extended span of years, might therein show a better claim for consideration. In the review of any life, there must be cause for sadness as well as for joy; and it is a foolish heart that can give vent to exultation only, and feel no self-reproach for neglected opportunity. And so in Albany, when we would boast our age and history, we should at least consider whether as a city we have, in all respects, been true to our early promise and advantages. In matters of trade and enterprise we may have done passingly well, and even in surrounding ourselves with all material comforts. But what about the influence which we should have allowed our artistic associations to exert upon us in fostering, enduring and wide-extended tastes? In what respect, while more and more richly embellishing our lives, have we reminded ourselves that, while our homes are to be made beautiful, their surroundings should not be neglected? And in this connection, how far have we impressed it upon our consciousness that we should strive to give our city, which in one sense is our larger home, a portion of our taste and culture; so that for this, as well as for commercial enterprise, it may have some claim upon the world's admiration and regard?

What example, in this direction, do we find in the cities from which, in part, our own city traces its lineage, and which we so complacently believe we are outstripping in every essential attribute? For centuries, indeed, they seemed to be dormant; it was no time to become inspired with ideas of progress, when siege and battle and rapine were almost the habit of the day. It may well be understood, that then, not only could no scheme for civic improvement be organized, but that even their household treasures must often need careful concealment. But within a generation there has been to many of those cities an awakening. The superfluity of their riches has been gathered into galleries, to which all the world has been invited for study. The love of art-culture has extended; and they have asked themselves why, with beauty in their homes, everything around them should not be made to correspond? They have re-embellished their churches and erected new civic buildings. They have not, in any rash spirit of modernizing, widened their narrow streets. This, if it could be done at all, would almost be profanation, since much history has there been made and centered. But in the outskirts they have opened newer and broader avenues; and little wooded parks have taken the place of antiquated fortifications now swept away; and arched colonnades have been extended as an artistic framework along the borders of noted places; and fountains have been set to gush at the corners of the streets or in open courts. Much of this has been done, too, not as we make improvement, through individual impulse grafting separate and incongruous ideas upon our streets, but rather through common assent giving the adornment of our city into the custody of thoughtful minds, whereby well conceived designs fitly carried out may gradually grow into a harmonious whole. And with all this, their great historic names and their benefactors have not been forgotten. In the galleries we see their sombre portraits in ruffs or slashed doublets, or chain armor, or official robes, an imposing line extending far back into the middle ages; in the niches outside the public buildings are their stone busts; in the public parks, bronze or marble statues more largely attest the gratitude of the people and keep alive those sacred memories.

How far, with all our boasted enterprise and progress, have we advanced into a realization that the material requirements of health, protection and convenient commercial facilities are not the only things our city need regard; but that the truest economy is that which, within certain bounds, would lavish our resources upon it, and by one systematic effort clothe it with beauty, and make it not only a satisfaction to ourselves, but an attraction to others? And in doing so, how far have we become ready to give grateful expression to the memory of our great men and benefactors? Their line does not reach back for many centuries, and yet they are not few in number. Almost at a thought we can recall many who long before this should have had a better recognition of their value to us. There is Petrus Stuyvesant, the last of our Dutch governors; a man who, in his time, was not greatly loved in Beaverwyck, and in resentment of his fancied encroachments was somewhat disrespectfully treated by it, but whose reputation has grown bright as a ruler of much administrative ability, and who, if he had not been deposed by a stronger power, would have deserved well of the whole colony, and now certainly seems to demand some notice in the city which has become its capital. There is DeWitt Clinton, the promoter of the Erie canal; who thereby helped make Albany what it is, instead of remaining, as might have happened, little more than an inland village. There is Robert Fulton; who, with his mechanical genius, fitly supplemented the work of Clinton, and gave to the canal the power more efficiently to let its cargoes float down to the ocean. There is Philip Schuyler, for a period the commander of the Northern patriot army, and for many months the defender of our outposts; and who, if due justice had been meted out to him, might himself have had the good fortune to fight the battles of Stillwater and Saratoga, and take prisoner the royalist leader whom he was merely left to entertain. There is Washington Irving, the most genial of New York writers; whose pleasantry about the customs of our ancestors has been long forgiven, as we have learned to read between the lines, and appreciate aright his tenderly drawn picturing of our colonial homes — as accurate and sympathetic in description as any thing that Scott has ever written about the lowland life of his native land. And there is Fennimore Cooper, still ranking as the greatest of American novelists; whose pen has made classic the woods and waters of our northern border, and who, in two novels of his later years, has illustrated old-time life upon the Hudson river, and the colonial society of Albany itself, with a fidelity and accuracy of detail that can never be excelled by any other pen, even though equal genius might be found to wield it. What has so far been done among us to give permanent expression of our gratitude to these and others who in this connection might be mentioned? Where is now even our single monument to the soldiers who, within our memory, went from among us to the battle field, never to return?

So far there may have been some excuse for a portion of our remissness. During the generation now passing we have been occupied with more serious matters than tasteful decoration of our streets, or public acknowledgment of our benefactors. For a while we were fighting for our homes; and there were times when we did not feel certain in what condition the fortune of war might leave them to us. And after that came days of trouble and despondency, in which all seemed dark in our credit and resources, and we knew not whether we should ever fully recover from the shock of arms and settle down once more to the pleasant ways of peace. But even within the present year the clouds of uncertainty have rolled apart, and we have become able to see prosperous paths stretching out before us. Three of our greatest generals have passed away, and we have met no indication of offense or detraction from those who once called themselves their enemies; nothing but the chivalrous respect with which brave men will ever regard other brave men who have fought with them upon principle and in honor. From his retirement the leader of the lost cause has come and again uttered those olden sophistries which once stirred half a continent to warfare. For a time there were some among us who stood uncertain about what might happen. Was this the glimmering of a torch which again would light us up with conflagration? But as we listened, we heard little to dismay us. Even the few words of sympathy with the utterances of the fallen chieftain had no fervor in them; and, rightly understood, seem nothing else than the desire to soften, for a short period, the disappointments of a broken down, embittered old man. The danger of disunion for any cause that we have yet known has forever passed away. Each footfall in the funeral march with which we have borne our heroes to their graves has found a throb of answering sympathy in some southern soldier's heart; and the hands that lightly met at Appomattox, have now been clasped with warm and fervent pressure across the tomb at Riverside. The aspiration of the great soldier has become fulfilled, and at last we have peace.

And now, with that peace has come our opportunity. How will we improve our coming years? Some day there will be other celebrations of this kind in Albany. I do not speak of another anniversary of our charter, a century hence. None who are now here would live to see it; nor, amid the many changes of social and civic life, could we be sure that it would ever have a place. But within the present generation will come the tri-centenary of Albany's first settlement; and it may be looked upon as certain that the occasion will not remain unimproved. There may be attractions attending it, like the present; once more in this very place, perhaps, and even with some of these same art and household treasures taking their mute part in it. And it is almost certain also, that there are many persons now here who will then be here again. With what spirit and under what circumstances will they come? Will they draw near through broken and market crowded streets,—past antiquities, unnoticed and uncared for,—along lines of architectural incongruities, our great buildings unfinished, and becoming a world-wide reproach, because no public spirit has been aroused with sufficient force to free them from political incapacity; and entering here, look upon the collection of that day as something to be considered with a careless and indifferent eye, and worthy only to afford an hour's amusement, before being remanded to its former comparative obscurity? Or, under happier auspices, will they come through pleasant and shaded ways, adorned with tasteful and harmonious architecture, past our public buildings all completed and crowned with the approbation of the world for their beauty and richness,—across bright open spaces where fountains sparkle in the sun, and through parks where our great men, in enduring bronze and marble, look down from their sculptured pedestals and mutely attest our grateful memory for them; and with such associations cheered, here gaze upon our relics, not merely as precious heirlooms that can tell entertaining stories of the past, but as treasures that have already taught a lesson, in adding inspiration toward an ever-brightening future of art and culture?

A pot pourri of national airs was rendered by the Philharmonic Society. Father Terry offered an impressive benediction, and the exercises were over. The audience then passed into the Academy building and inspected the grand collection of rare, historic and valuable articles.

ALBANY'S

BICENTENNIAL LOAN EXHIBITION.

THE Bicentennial Loan Exhibition is held under the auspices of a Loan Commission appointed by the Citizens' Bicentennial Committee. The exhibition is in the Albany Academy building, which, from its central location near the Capitol, is admirably adapted for such a purpose. It will be opened on Monday, July 5th, as a part of the Fourth of July exercises, and continue open daily (Sunday excepted), until the close of the Bicentennial week, Saturday, July 24.

Admission twenty-five cents; season tickets, not transferable, $1.00. The hours are as follows: For the first two weeks, from 9 A. M. to 10 P. M.; during the Bicentennial week, July 19-24 inclusive, 8 A. M. to 10 P. M.

There are seven general departments of the exhibition proper. The Department of Pictures, Prints and Statuary occupies the east room in the second story. On account of lack of space many of the Prints have been placed in the Book and Manuscript room. The Department of Old Furniture, Ancient Dress and General Relics, the south-east room on the principal story. The Department of Ceramics, Glass and Ivories, the north-east room on the principal story. The Department of Bric-a-brac, Old Silver and Personal Ornaments, the east room on the second story. The Department of Books, Pamphlets, Maps and Manuscripts, the north-east room on the principal story. The Department of Indian Relics and the Department of Relics of the Civil War, the south room on the second story.

The exhibition is designed especially to illustrate the growth, development and historic past of Albany, and to present to the minds of this generation some idea of the character, manners and habits of their ancestors, and to awaken an interest in the men and events which have made the city famous throughout the United States. At the same time it is not limited in its scope to historic Albany. It includes any thing of interest in connection with the colonial or State governments of New York and surrounding Commonwealths, and all articles of value or artistic worth, such as pictures, prints, statuary, ceramics, glass, ivories, old furniture, ancient dress, Indian relics, bric-a-brac, silver, bronzes, personal ornaments, books, pamphlets, manuscripts, maps, etc. The net receipts of the exhibition will be used to commemorate in some suitable and permanent manner the Bicentennial anniversary.

All articles are moved free of expense, and by expert workmen. Receipts are given for all articles received. After the closing of the exhibition, articles belonging to parties who are out of town will be stored with the Safe Deposit Company, to await the owners' return. A general insurance against loss or damage by fire, as far as practicable, has been effected on all articles; and a specific insurance on specific articles, at the request of their owners, and at such valuation as they have desired. Watchmen are employed day and night to guard the collection. Small articles of special value are exhibited in glass cases, locked and guarded. The building itself, as is well known, is a substantial, detached, stone structure, affording a minimum of fire risk.

(Zuni Pottery from the Collection of James H. Manning.)

This pottery is from the Zuni and Moki Indians of Arizona and New Mexico, known as "Pueblos" or community dwellers. Their pursuits are pastoral and agricultural, and notwithstanding the fact that they live in this apparent civilized manner they are still the most ardent idol and sun-worshippers of this continent. Their implements for domestic use are all manufactured by themselves. Their plows are made of wood, their carts are also made of wood, their hoes, corn planters and all other implements are mostly wooden. War implements are almost unknown to them, and the implements of this character which are still in their possession are merely the relics of ancient times, when they engaged in war with their enemies. They use the bow and arrow, the war club and spears. The most interesting phase in their domestic life is the manufacture of pottery, all of which is made without the potter's wheel, and shaped entirely by hand, and decorated with grotesque and almost unknown figures. These figures generally represent animals, clouds, rain, etc.; they are made from the common clay of the country, molded as above explained, entirely by hand, and when completed are baked on the open ground, by piling fuel all around them. The designs are painted on them with small brushes, made from the spear of Yucca, and the material which is used for painting them is generally some mineral pigment found in the country. This pottery consists of mugs for drinking, vases for holding water, and a variety of cooking vessels. The accompanying photographs show in some instances the manner of their living, and the general appearance of the villages in which they reside.

The "Kakamona," or Japanese wall pictures, used in decorating the Ceramic Room, have been kindly loaned by Mr. James Terry Gardiner.

The antique Persian, Kelim, Ghiordes, Kisac, Daghistan and Camels' Hair rugs, used in the decoration of the Ceramic Room, have been kindly loaned by the Rev. Wesley R. Davis, and also the "Kakamona" of Baby Bears, a water-color on silk, by the famous Japanese artist, Okio.

BOOKS, PAMPHLETS, ETC.

North-west Room, Principal Story.

- 1 Cicero.—De Officiis et Paradoxa Printed by Fust and Schœffer, Mayence, February 4, 1466.

This edition of the Officia was the last book printed by Fust, the second of the triumvirs of the printing world. Gutenberg's name never appeared in any of his books. Schœffer, the last of the trio, married the daughter of Fust, as the words, Manu Petri pueri mei, in the colophon of the above book seem to indicate. Fust went to Paris soon after the printing of this work, and died there that same year, of the plague. The present book is a perfect specimen of this press.

- 2 Saint Augustine.—De Singularitate clericorum. Printed by Ulric Zell, Cologne, 1467.

This is the first book printed at Cologne bearing a date and the name of the printer. Zell printed very many books from this time until 1494, but put his name in only three books. At the close of the fifteenth century there were twenty printing establishments in Cologne.

- 3 Cicero.—Epistola ad Atticum Printed by Nicholas Jenson, Venice, 1470.

Jenson was perhaps the most elegant printer of his time. Louis XI sent him to Mayence to learn printing, intending, doubtless, to have the art introduced into his realm, but for some reason Jenson, while he ever after proudly wrote Gallicus after his name, never returned to France, settling in Venice, and making that city famous in the annals of typography by his beautiful Roman type, straight lines and wide margins. The colophon containing the date and printer's name will be found on the last page.

- 4 Diogenes Laertius.—Vitæ Philosophorum Printed by Nicholas Jenson, Venice, 1475.

This is the first edition of this work, and by the same printer as the preceding title. This copy belonged once to Philip Melancthon, the religious reformer, and is filled with marginal notes in his handwriting. It was afterward in the collection of Dr. Kloss, of Frankfort.

- 5 Chronicon Nurembergense. Printed by Antonius Koburger, Nuremberg, 1493.

While this book is not particularly rare, it is full of interest on account of the wood engravings made by Wolgemuth and Pleydenwulf. There are over two thousand of these in the volume. Albert Durer had been an apprentice to Wolgemuth from 1486 to 1490, and many of the engravings are suggestive of his hand. It was one of the most pretentious books of the fifteenth century. On the recto of folio cclxiii is the first Dance of Death of which we have any recollection, and which probably formed the model of this kind of drawing. The book was reprinted in 1497, in smaller folio and inferior type.

- 6 Horace — Opera omnia. Printed by Johannes Gürninger, Strasbourg, 1498.

In the Bibl. Harleian, vol. iii, No. 754, this edition of Horace is called "one of the greatest curiosities in the whole Harleian collection." The text is in large Roman type, while a small Roman letter is used for the annotations.

- 7 Liber festivalis. Printed by Julian Notary, Westminster [London], 1499.

This book is printed in English of the old black letter character. The title and the headings of the chapters are in Latin. The reverse of the last folio bears the colophon and the printer's peculiar mark. This is the only book printed by Notary in England in the fifteenth century. This copy is bound by Chambolle-Duru.

- 8 Robert Whittington, — Grammatices opusculum. Printed by Wynken De Worde, London, Fleet street, 1519.

Wynken DeWorde succeeded to Caxton's press. In 1502 he moved from Westminster to Fleet street. The peculiar device is partly Caxton's and partly his own. The letters W and C are the initials of the first English printer.

- 9 Dionisius Richel. — Un compendio de las Processiones. Printed by Juan Cromberger, Mexico, 1544.

This little Spanish tract of twelve leaves is one of the rarest of Americana. As with the discovery of the art, so with its introduction into the new world—the date is difficult to fix. Senor Icazbalceta, the Mexican bibliographer, gives 1540 as the date of the first book printed in this country, and of which a copy is said to be owned in Madrid. He cites the present title as the fourth book. Cromberger had printed in Seville and unquestionably was the first to set up a press in America.

- 10 Regla Christiana breve. Printed in Mexico, 1547.

This book has no printer's name, but, as will be observed, is of the same type and character as the preceding.

- 11 Speculum Conjugiorum. Printed by Johannes Paulus, Brissensis, Mexico, 1556.

This printer, known as Juan Pablos, is claimed by some as the first printer in America. He is believed by some bibliographers to have been a workman for Cromberger, and upon the latter's death to have come into possession of the press.

- 12 An Almanack for the year of our Lord 1646.

This Almanack was printed at Cambridge, in New England, in the year 1645, being calculated for the year 1646. It was printed by Stephen Day, the first printer in the colonies and the printer of the Bay State Psalm book. Stephen Day's name never appeared in an imprint. This honor was reserved for his brother, Mathew Day, the printer of the succeeding title. These four Almanacks belonged to the Rev. Samuel Hough, minister of Reading, Mass. They were interleaved by him and contain many entries in his handwriting. They passed into the possession of Judge Samuel Sewell, and remained in the Sewell family until they were purchased by the late John K. Wiggins of Boston. From the latter's collection they passed into that of the late Mr. George Brinley of Hartford. At the sale of his books in 1878 they came into the library of the present owner. The three printers who were first to exercise their art in the colonies are here represented, they are Stephen Day, Mathew Day and Samuel Green.

- 13 An Almanack for the year of our Lord, 1647. Cambridge, printed by Mathew Day, 1647.

From a purely bibliographical standpoint this is the rarest book of all the Americana. It is the first book printed in the colonies with the name of printer, date and place, and it is the only copy of this book known.

- 14 An Almanack for the year of our Lord 1648. Printed at Cambridge, 1648.

Over against the month of June for this year the Rev. Mr. Hough recorded that on "14 June '48, Alice Jones was executed at Boston for witchcraft." It was this manuscript note made contemporaneously with the event which fixed in the history of New England the date of the first execution there for witchcraft, and the name of the unfortunate person.

- 15 An Almanack for the year of our Lord 1650. Printed at Cambridge, 1650.

Each of these Almanacks has been bound by Mathews the elder, of Brooklyn, the foremost binder of our country. The present title is so arranged as to show its covers and design.

- 16 A Fast of God's Chusing. By Thomas Thacher, Boston. Printed by John Foster, 1678.

This is a sermon preached on a public fast day by the first pastor of the old South Church of Boston. Foster was the first to set up a press in Boston. His earliest book is dated 1676. This copy is bound by Riviere in his best style.

- 17 Keith, George. — The Presbyterian and Independent Visible Churches in New England. Philadelphia, printed by Will Bradford, 1689.

William Bradford was the first printer in the Province of Pennsylvania. His first work was dated December 28, 1685 and was an almanack for the year 1686.

- 18 Keith, George. — The Notes of the True Church. Printed and sold by William Bradford at the sign of the Bible in New York, 1704.

- 19 Keith, George. — The Great Necessity and Use of the Holy Sacraments. Printed and sold by William Bradford at the sign of the Bible in New York, 1704.

These two books are from the first press in the city of New York. Bradford began printing there in 1693. In 1694 he printed the "Laws of the Province of New York," which may be called the first book printed, the work done in 1693 consisting of proclamations only.

- 20 Cicero. — Omnia Opera. Printed by Sebastian Gryphius, Lyons, 1546.

The Gryphi were famous printers in Paris and Lyons. This edition of Cicero's works is not very highly valued, but a single volume from the set is here presented to illustrate the Grolier bindings. Each volume is clothed sumptuously in Grolier designs. There is a Grolier club in New York, but if the possession of a genuine Grolier was made the qualification for admission, the circle would be exceedingly small. Grolier was the patron of Aldus and the Mæcenas of printers and book lovers. Says Dibdin: "What bibliomaniac can enjoy perfect tranquility of mind unless he possess a Grolier copy of some work." At the bottom one reads the benevolent motto "Jo Grolierii et Amicorum."

- 21 Ptolemy. Printed for John Sprint, London.

This copy was bound by Roger Payne, the celebrated and eccentric binder, and his original bill for binding the same is also exhibited.

- 22 Valerius Maximus. Printed by Aldus, Venice, 1502.

This is one of the earliest Aldines in which the Anchor device appears, and which will be found on the recto of the first leaf.

- 23 Hennepin. — Nouvelle Decouverte. Printed by Brædelar, Utrecht, 1697.

This is the first edition of Father Hennepin's "New Discovery," and this is the first engraving of Niagara.

- 24 Evans. — The Minister of Christ. Philadelphia, printed by B. Franklin, 1732.

This and the two following titles are from Benjamin Franklin's press. This is an early specimen of Franklin's printing and rare.

- 25 Ascott. — Considerations Relating to the Present State of the Christian Religion. B. Franklin, at the New Printing Office, Philadelphia, 1732.

The autograph of Benjamin Franklin is to be seen with this book.

- 26 The Constitutions of the Free Masons. Re-printed in Philadelphia, 1734.

This is the first masonic book printed in America, and was printed by Benjamin Franklin, himself an active member of the order.

- 27 Illustrations of Masonry. Batavia, printed for the author, 1826.

This is the original Morgan book. It was in type when its author, William Morgan, disappeared, or as some say, was kidnapped.

- 28 Laws and Ordinances of the City of Albany. Printed by Alexander and James Robertson, Albany, 1773.

This is the first book printed in Albany.

- 29 The Charter of the City of Albany. New York, printed by H. Gaîne, in Hanover Square, 1771.

This is the first printed copy of our charter. At a meeting of the Common Council, held January 31, 1706, it was "Resolved, that Mr. John Abeel, Mr. Evert Banker, Mr. Hendrick Hansen, Mr. Johannes Cuyler, either or more of them by occasion when they go down to New York, take a fair copy of the city charter and agree with the printer to print the same at such cheap rate as can be agreed for to the cost and advantage of the city, and for the amount thereof to be paid out of the first money to come in." Sixty-five years passed before the charter was printed. Let every Albany bibliomaniac seek these two books. They are becoming very, very rare. Generally they are found bound together.

- 30 The Book of Mormon. — By Joseph Smith, Jr. Palmyra, printed by E. B. Grandin, for the Author, 1830.

This is the original edition of the Mormon Bible. It has the "testimony of three witnesses" on the recto of the page directly after page 588, and on the reverse side the "testimony of eight witnesses" to the "plates of gold" shown them by Joseph Smith, Jr., upon which was the "Revelation," and from which the Bible was translated. It is said that the manuscript from which the book was printed and which suggested the scheme to Smith, was the work of a demi-clergyman, Solomon Spalding.

- 31 Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints Kirtland, Ohio, 1835. Printed by F. G. Williams & Co.

This book of the "Doctrine and Covenants" is much rarer than the Bible. Kirtland, where it was printed, was to have been the New Jerusalem. It is interesting to note that at this early period of the church the Mormons were not ready to avow their belief in polygamy, and on page 251 it is distinctly stated "we declare that we believe, that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband."

- 32 Junius. London, printed for Henry Sampson Woodfall, 1772.

This is the first authorized edition of the letters of Junius. This copy belonged to Sir William Draper, and has his autograph on the title page and many autographic notes, interesting because of the important part he played in drawing the fire of Junius. Surrounding the book are autographic letters of Woodfall, the printer, Sir Philip Francis, John Wilkes, Duke of Grafton, Duke of Portland, Lord North and other characters in Junius. Warren Hastings' autograph will be found directly over that of Sir Philip Francis, the reputed author of Junius.

- 33 Johannis de Aurbach Summa. Printed by Ginther Zainer, Augsburg, 1469.

This book is exhibited as a specimen of early printing. It is the second book printed at Augsburg, and with the exception of the Cicero of 1466 and the Augustinus of 1467, is the earliest printed book in this collection.

- 34 Mercurius Trismegistus. Printed by Gerardus de Lisa, (quarto) Treviso, 1471.

This is the first edition of this work. The type is peculiar for that period.

- 35 Fasciculus Temporum. Printed by Arnoldus Therhoerner, Cologne, 1474.

This is the first edition of this work so often reproduced in the 15th century. The wood cut on the page at which the book is open speaks of the inferior state of the art in Cologne at that period.

- 36 Fasciculus Temporum. Printed by Erhardus Ratdolt, Venice, 1481.

This edition is more interesting than the preceding. The state of the art of engraving at that time is seen in the curious attempt to produce cavities and depth of shade in the right hand picture of the page on which the book is opened. On the left hand page the city of Venice is seen.

- 37 Vetus Testamentum Belgicum. Printed by Jacobs and Yemants, (two vols.) Delft in Holland, 1477, folio.

The second volume is here shown opened at the colophon to show the printers' mark and date. This is the first impression of the Dutch Bible, and as such should be of interest to the descendants of the Hollanders. The book is very rare.

- 38 Evangelia und Renaria.

Johannes Bamler, of Augsburg, is believed by bibliographers to have been the printer of this book, one of the earliest editions of the Epistles and Gospels. The curious wood-cuts scattered through the volume alone make it interesting. This copy belonged to Dr. Kloss of Frankfort. The wood-cut at which the volume is opened, represents the Saviour rising from the tomb while the three soldiers sleep.

- 39 La Mer des Histoires. (Two vols. Folio) Printed by Pierre le Rouge, Paris, 1488.

This is the first French, and a very rare, version of the Rudimentum Novitiorum. The wood-cuts have been highly colored by some miserable hand and consequently disfigured for the bibliomaniac.

- 40 Thucidides. The hystory writtome by Thucidides, London, 1550.

This is the first English translation of this author.

- 41 Euclid. Printed at London by John Daye, 1570.

This is the first English edition of Euclid. The preface was written by John Dee, the famous astrologist. The book is opened to show the admirable way in which solid angles were taught.

- 42 Roger Ascham. Toxophilus. Printed in London by Ed. Whitechurch, 1545.

This is the first edition of this book which is read with relish even now by those who love the purity of early English. He taught Elizabeth the languages, and was appointed secretary to Edward VI. This book was dedicated to Henry VIII.

- 43 Roger Ascham. The Schoolmaster. Printed by John Daye, London, 1570.

The first edition of this work. It was published by his widow, Margaret Ascham.

- 44 Francis Bacon. The two books on learning. Printed for Henric Torres, London, 1605.

This is the first edition of the two books. It was enlarged to nine books and printed in Latin in 1623.

- 45 Francis Bacon. IX Books on Learning. Printed by Leon. Lichfield, Oxford, 1640.

This is the first English edition of the nine books. An autographic signature of Francis Bacon is also exhibited. The words "To tresorer Mr. Chanc, at ye excheqr," are also in his handwriting. The document is dated November 26, 1613, and has several other rare signatures. The title page and frontispiece of the book were engraved by Marshall.

- 46 Cotton Matter. Magnalia Christi Americana London, printed for Thomas Parkhurst, 1702.

This is the first edition of this first ecclesiastical history of New England. The original map is found in this copy. Upon it our city is called New Albion, and the island south of us, Bears Island.

- 47 Arithmetic designed for beginners. Raleigh, N. C., Bronson & Farrar, 1864.

This specimen of Confederate printing is interesting because of the curious examples given for solution. On page 44, example 6 reads: "If one Confederate soldier can whip 7 Yankees, how many soldiers can whip 49 Yankees?" The book is opened at another interesting proposition.

- 48 Free-Masons, The Constitutions of the. London, printed by William Hunter, 1723.

This is the first masonic book ever printed or published. It was written by Dr. Anderson, secretary of the Grand Lodge, London.

- 49 Terentius. Opera. Printed by Grüniger, Strasbourg, 1496.

This is the same printer who gave us the Horace mentioned above. These are among the first attempts to represent dramatic character in engravings.

- 50 Lactantii, Opera. Printed by Les Frères de la Vie Commune Rostock, 1476.

This is the first book printed in this place.

- 51 Fasciculus temporum. Printed by Jean Valdener, Utrecht, 1480.

This is the finest specimen known of this press.

- 52 Bartholomeus. Printed by Jacob Bellaert, Harlem, 1485.

This curious book is the only specimen of this press.

- 547 Walton (Izaak.) The compleat angler or the contemplative man's recreation. Being a discourse of fish and fishing not unworthy the perusal of most anglers. Simon Peter said : I go a fishing :
and they said, we also will go with thee. John xxi.3. London, printed by T. Maxey for Rich Marriot, in S. Dunstan's Churchyard, Fleet-street, 1653." 8vo..... Dean Sage
This copy of the 1st edition of Walton belonged to John Evelyn the author of Evelyn's Diary, and is perfect.
- 548 Walton, Izaak. "The compleat angler or the contemplative man's recreation, etc." Printed by J. G. for Rich Marriot, 1655,
Dean Sage
This is the 2d edition, and it is one of the strange facts in bibliography, that although a perfect copy of this edition is quite as rare if not rarer than the 1st, there is a very great difference, much more than in ordinary cases of the kind, in their value. A perfect copy.
- 549 Walton Izaak. "The compleat angler or the contemplative

This is the 3d edition. A perfect copy.

set considered so desirable by collectors. A perfect copy.

- 552 S. (J.) "The true art of angling; or, the best and speediest way of taking all sorts of fresh-water fish with the worm, fly, paste and other baits in their proper seasons; how to know the haunts of fish and angle for them in all waters and weathers, at the top, middle and bottom, baiting of the ground and right baits, oyls and oyntments, baits natural and artificial; the several ways of angling; to make oyl of asper, and many rare secrets never before made publick; containing the whole body of angling, and mystery of a compleat angler, by J. S., Gent., a Brother of the Angle. London, printed for George Conyers at the Golden Ring and John Sprint at the Bell in Little Britain. Price bound 6d." Perfect copy. 24 mo Dean Sage

This minute work by an anonymous writer forms one of the marked features of most angling book collections, partly from its merits as a manual, but far more from its rarity, only a few copies of the earlier issues having escaped the wear and tear of time.—Bibliotheca Piscatoria.

- 553 "Barnes (Dame Julyans.) The bok [of St. Albans] containing the treatises of Hawking; Hunting; Coat-armour; Fishing; and Blasing of Arms. As printed at Westminster, by Wynkyn de Worde; the year of the Incarnation of our Lord 1496. London, reprinted by Harding and Wright, for White and Cochrane, and R. Triphook 1810." Fol. Dean Sage 150 copies printed. This consists of "Introduction," "Biographical Notices," and finally a verbatim, literatim, and punctuation fac-simile of the 2d edition of "Boke of St. Albans," a bibliographical labor carefully and conscientiously executed by Mr. Joseph Haslewood.—Bib. Pisc.

- 554 Markham, Gervase. "The young sportsman's delight and instructor in angling, fowling, hawking, hunting, ordering singing birds, hawks, poultry, conies, hares, dogs, etc., and how to cure them. by G. M. Sold at the Ring in Little Britain. Price 6d." [With a second title, as follows]: "A compleat and experienced angler, in two parts: or the Anglers Vade-mecum, shewing the best way to make fishing rods, lines, floats, plummets, hooks, artificial flies, panniers and other tackle; and how to find the haunts of fish, and take them with all sorts of baits, as well artificial as natural, in all sorts of water. To make divers sorts of oils and ointments exceeding the oil of osprey. The second part containing directions to take fowl, and to order singing birds, hawks, hares, poultry, and dogs. Printed for G. Conyers at the Ring in Little Britain," [anno 1712] pp. iv, 138. 24°.

Dean Sage

The Bibliotheca Piscatoria says: "This book is very rare, and we only know of the existence of one perfect copy, which is now in the Denison collection." The above is the copy spoken of in the Bib. Pisc.

- 555 Walton, Izaak. "The complete angler or the contemplative man's recreation: being a discourse of rivers, fish ponds, fish and fishing written by Izaak Walton and instructions how to angle for a trout or grayling in a clear stream by Charles Cotton. With original memoirs and notes by Sir Harris Nicolas, K. C. M. G. 2 vols. London William Pickering 1836." 8°.....Dean Sage

This edition was originally issued in numbers in two forms; one with the impressions of the plates on the pages direct, at six guineas, the other with the impressions of plates on India paper at ten guineas. The "Chronicle of the Compleat Angler" says of it that it is "One of the handsomest publications of modern times, an ornament to the Angler's Library, unique of its kind, and perhaps destined to remain so."

- 556 Scrope (William). "Days and nights of salmon fishing in the Tweed; with a short account of the natural history and habits of the salmon, instructions to sportsmen, anecdotes, etc. By William Scrope, Esq. London, Murray, 1843".....Dean Sage

Copies of this first edition are scarce. One of the most entertaining of angling books.

- 557 Crawhall, Joseph. "The completest angling booke that euer was writ, being done oute of ye Hebrewe and other Tongves, by a Person of Honor. Adorn'd with scvlptores. Imprynted att Newe Castle upon Tine by Andro Reed for ye authour ande fynnysshed ye twelft daie of August thys yere thyncarnacon of oure Lorde MDCCCLXXXI." Pp. 238. 4°.....Dean Sage

One hundred copies of this book were printed and the plates destroyed. In its unique composition and the artistic skill displayed as well in its general style as in the exquisite pen and ink and etched illustrations with which it abounds, it deserves a high rank among the modern productions of the book-maker's art. The first edition of this was published in 1859 and was limited to forty copies. It is a smaller book than this and contains fewer illustrations.

- 558 Crawhall, Joseph. Izaak Walton; his Wallet Booke. c 1510.ccc.lxxxv. London, Field & Iver, The Leadenhall Press. Samson Low, Marston, Searle & Rivington.....Dean Sage

This is the last of Mr. Crawhall's productions, and consists of "the songs and poesies" contained in the "Compleat Angler." Every page is illustrated in Crawhall's peculiar style of originality. Of the large paper edition one hundred copies were printed, and to each of these is attached by a ribbon one of the wooden blocks used for the cuts. Its merits are far below those of several of Mr. Crawhall's former works.

- 559 Hart der gesuntheit Zü latein Hortus Sanitatis. Sagt in vier Bücheren vie hernach volger. Im Ersten — Vierfüszigen und Krichenden. Im Anderen — Vöglen und den Fliegenden. Im Drittten — Vischen und Schwimmenden. Im Vierden. Dem Edlen Gesteyn und allem som den Anderen der erden wachsenist. Getruckt zu Strassburg bei Mathia Apiario — nach Christi gebirt MDXXXVI jar.....Dean Sage

This is compiled chiefly from the German Hortus Sanitatis of J. Aube. The "Tractus de Picibus" is divided into many short chapters and has numerous wood-cuts of fish and fishing of the most singular character. These cuts are interesting from the fact that they are among the earliest in the art of wood engraving. The title page and colophon, the latter being especially elaborate, are attributed to Holbein. The contemporaneous paper binding is, through accident or design, covered with leaves of a black letter copy of the New Testament.
